Read the following excerpt from a student paper. How can the writer improve his or her organization?

Of all the field trips we've taken at school, our trip to the Newberg Art Museum was the most enjoyable. I saw different kinds of art that I had never seen before, like paintings, photographs, and sculpture. Seeing actual artwork, rather than pictures of artwork in books, influenced me in several ways. All in all, this trip was a truly life-changing experience. It gave me new ideas for my own art, and it made me consider pursuing art as a career.

Compare the student text with the source.

Source: Jonny Wilkes, "Why do we say 'mad as a hatter'?" Published in History Revealed May 2015.

Hat-making used to be surprisingly dangerous work, as the manufacture of felt involved mercury. Working in confined spaces, hatters couldn't avoid coming into contact with the substance or breathing in harmful vapours.

Student text:

Making hats was once a dangerous enterprise because mercury, a poisonous substance, was used to make felt, so hatters breathed mercury fumes while they worked (Wilkes).
